MANAGING IMPARTIALITY

Ampere for Renewable Energy

The management of impartiality is imperative for Ampere's delivery of validation, verification and determination services. Ampere's values include that we never compromise on quality and integrity, and indeed our independence has been one of our strongest assets throughout our history.

Ampere for Renewable Energy "Ampere", delivering amongst other services validation/verification, has imposed operational and managerial controls to ensure impartiality in every delivery. The service responsibilities within Ampere are defined. Organizational responsibilities have been defined within Ampere where the Managing Director, Technical Manager, and Quality Manager have defined responsibilities. Further, all employees are required to have defined responsibilities.

The main principle for management of impartiality is that We shall not verify or validate our own work. This means that Ampere will not provide consulting services to a verification/validation customer if the consultancy activity is not acceptable in combination with verification/validation.

Main scenarios threatening Ampere's impartiality have been defined. Operational tools to ensure and demonstrate impartiality on a project and individual level are implemented. Regular monitoring of impartiality management is enforced.

Further details of our procedures for the management of impartiality can be provided upon request.
